

IT WENT QUIET

Claire, 38

she / her · variant rusty

Not shy. Used to be the one who talked to everyone.

I used to be good at this. I do not know exactly when that stopped being true.

She is the only one of the five who is not a beginner, and she will close the page the moment it treats her like one. She does not need to learn this. She needs to use it again.

Reassurance leads, and the frame is it comes back — never you can learn it.

03What she wants

GOALS

GOAL 01

Get it back, not learn it again

She had this. She wants the muscle back, not a beginners course.

GOAL 02

Start saying yes to things again

Be the one who leaves the work drinks last, the way she used to.

GOAL 03

See that it is actually moving

Proof it is coming back, so she keeps going past week two.

SUCCESS Week six against week one is a number she can look at, and it is going up.

04What hurts

IN HER WORDS, FROM THE PAGE

01

The circle got smaller

A move, a break-up, working from home. Fewer chats, without choosing it.

02

So it takes effort

The thing that used to be automatic now needs thinking about.

03

And you notice

Which is the bit that makes it feel awkward.

05What she thinks before she taps

| I am not shy, this is not for me. | Correct. It is not about shyness, it is about practice you stopped getting. |
| Is this going to be patronising?  | The page opens with the good news, not with what is wrong with you.         |
| Will I stick with it?             | Three minutes a day. Less than the drink you would have had first.          |

07 Pain, barrier, solution

WHY SHE HAS NOT FIXED IT ALREADY

PAIN

Noticing that the thing which used to be automatic now takes visible effort.

BARRIER

Pride, and correctly so — she was good at this. She will not self-identify as having a problem, and she will close anything that treats her as a beginner.

SOLUTION

Framed as getting back in practice rather than learning. Three private minutes a day, and a score that shows week six against week one.

08 The message that lands

WHAT SHE RESPONDS TO

Circumstance, never deficiency. She will accept a message that says the practice stopped, and reject any message that says something is wrong with her.

01 You did not lose it. You just stopped using it.

02 Nothing changed about you. Only how often you get to practise.

03 It comes back faster than you would think.

SAY IT LIKE THIS

Warm, adult, matter-of-fact. Attribute everything to circumstance — the move, the remote job, the smaller circle. Assume competence throughout and never explain the basics.

NEVER SAY

Beginner. Learn. Shy. Improve yourself. Any suggestion she is broken or starting from zero, and she is gone on the first line.

4:5 · 15S · AMBIENT ONLY

GENERATION PROMPT — PASTE INTO SEEDANCE / VEO

Cinematic 4:5. A woman in her late thirties stands in a warm, comfortable, quiet flat holding a mug, looking out of a window at early evening light. The room is well kept and completely silent. She glances at her phone; there is nothing on it. She looks back out. Soft warm practical lighting, muted autumnal palette, static shot with an almost imperceptible push-in. Realistic, 35mm, gentle grain. Quiet room tone, distant traffic, no music, no dialogue.

DO NOT Never use the word beginner, and never offer to teach her. The moment the page implies she cannot do this, she is gone — she could do this five years ago and she knows it.
