

LOSES THE ROOM

Arjun, 33

he / him · variant speaking

Senior enough to present. Not senior enough to be listened to automatically.

“
Nobody has ever told me I talk too fast. I just watch people stop listening.”

02 Who he is

THE ARCHETYPE

AGE 33	LOCATION London, UK
HOUSEHOLD Married, one child under five	EDUCATION MBA
OCCUPATION Product manager, presents to leadership	FEEDBACK RECEIVED None. Everyone is too polite.
TRIGGER The monthly leadership review	BUDGET Has one. This is career spend.

He does not need convincing that it is a skill — he already believes that. What he has never had is a measurement. Everything he has been told is a feeling somebody had about him.

He is the persona the product is most literally built for: the delivery half of the score is measured from the recording, not guessed.

03 What he wants

GOALS

GOAL 01

Be listened to in the room he is already in

He has the seat at the table. He wants the attention that should come with it.

GOAL 02

Get a number instead of a feeling

Something he can actually work on, rather than somebody being polite.

GOAL 03

Walk into the hard conversation ready

Difficult feedback, a disagreement, the explanation that never lands.

SUCCESS He finishes a presentation and the first question is about the content, not a request to repeat it.

04 What hurts

IN HIS WORDS, FROM THE PAGE

01

You speed up

When you are nervous you talk faster, and the room stops following.

02

You fill the gaps

Um, so, basically. You do not hear it. Everyone else does.

03

Nothing changes

The meeting ends, nobody says anything, and you do it again next week.

05 What he thinks before he taps

OBJECTION → ANSWER

HE THINKS	THE PAGE ANSWERS
Is the score just an opinion?	The delivery half is measured. Tap any score to see the numbers.
I do not have time for a course.	Three minutes the night before the meeting.
Will it actually change anything?	"Seven ums in three minutes" is something you can work on. "Be more confident" is not.

06 How he uses it

THE REAL MOMENT

WHEN The night before the meeting	WHAT HE PICKS Hard feedback, a job interview, explaining the tricky thing.	WHAT HE WATCHES Words per minute, pause length, filler count
STEP 01 Pick a situation A job interview, a networking room, giving hard feedback.	STEP 02 Talk Hold the button and speak. It answers back and pushes, like a person would.	STEP 03 See the numbers Your speed, your pauses, your ums, and a clearer way to say it.

07 Pain, barrier, solution

WHY HE HAS NOT FIXED IT ALREADY

PAIN

Being in the room, holding the floor, and watching attention leave anyway.

BARRIER

Time, and the assumption that fixing this means a coach and several hundred pounds. He is also not certain it is fixable at all.

SOLUTION

Three minutes the night before, and a measured number instead of a feeling somebody was too polite to share.

08 The message that lands

WHAT HE RESPONDS TO

Measurement. He is the one persona who already agrees it is a skill — what he has never been given is a number, and a number is the entire pitch.

01 Seven “um”s in three minutes. Now you know.

02 Nobody at work will ever tell you how you sound.

03 Practise the meeting before the meeting.

SAY IT LIKE THIS

Professional, specific, numeric. Lead with the measurement. He responds to instrumentation, not encouragement, and he is the one persona who will read a second line of copy.

NEVER SAY

Social anxiety. Shy. Confidence. He does not believe he has a problem with people — he believes he has a problem being heard, and mislabelling it makes the page about somebody else.

09 Where to reach him

CHANNELS

LinkedIn

The only persona where it is worth the CPM. Job-title targeting.

Google Search

how to stop saying um, how to speak more clearly at work

Podcast reads

Career and management shows. He listens on the commute.

BEST BET LinkedIn. The only persona where the CPM is worth paying, because he can expense the outcome. Target by job title: managers, consultants, product and delivery leads.

10 The funnel

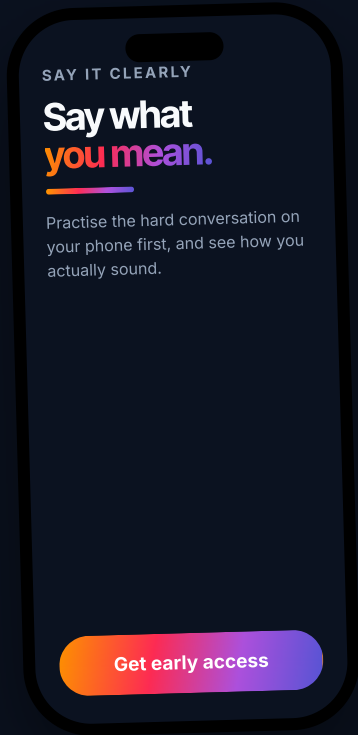

AWARENESS TO LOYALTY

STAGE	CHANNEL & FORMAT	WHAT IT HAS TO DO	MEASURE
Awareness	LinkedIn video · 1:1 or 16:9 · 15–30s	The meeting where he loses the room, shown from the room.	View-through, cost per qualified click
Consideration	Landing page /speaking-up/	The numbers come early, before the mechanism. Measurement is the product for him.	Scroll to the score section
Conversion	Get early access → TestFlight	Price is not his barrier. Watch revenue here, not just installs.	testflight_click, then paid conversion
Loyalty	Tied to his meeting calendar	He comes back before each presentation. Notify on that rhythm rather than a daily one and he renews.	Paid renewal rate

READ IT AS Watch revenue, not just installs. He is the most likely of the five to pay, because he can expense the reason.

11 The page he gets

VARIANT & RUNNING ORDER

FULL URL

improvtalk.vip/speaking-up/

Campaign landing page · noindex

01 The problem

02 The good news

03 Your score

04 How it works

05 What you get

06 FAQ

The numbers come third, early and before the mechanism. The measurement is the product for him — it is the thing nobody else offers.

12 The video ad

1:1 SQUARE · 20S · AMBIENT, CAPTIONS BURNED IN

GENERATION PROMPT — PASTE INTO SEEDANCE / VEO

Cinematic 1:1 square. A glass-walled meeting room, six people around a pale table in cool daylight. A man in his early thirties presents at the head of the table, speaking quickly, gesturing more than he needs to. Around him attention quietly drifts – a phone turned face up, a glance at a laptop, someone looking out of the window. Static tripod shot with a very slow push-in. Clean corporate palette, realistic, 50mm. Muffled speech and room tone, no intelligible dialogue.

FORMAT

1:1 square · 20s · ambient, captions burned in

ON-SCREEN TEXT

“You did not lose the argument. You lost the room.” — at 7s

END CARD

Brand gradient · “Say what you mean.” · Get early access

DO NOT Never frame this as social anxiety. He does not think he has a problem with people — he thinks he has a problem being heard. Get that wrong and the page is about somebody else.