L1PROBLEM RECOGNITION HOOK

12s · 9:16

He had the answer. In his head. In time.

SEEDANCE PROMPT — PASTE AS WRITTEN

Cinematic 9:16 vertical. An office lunch table, five colleagues mid-conversation in warm daylight, easy overlapping laughter. A man in his late twenties sits fractionally back from the group, following every word closely, forming a sentence he never says. Handheld with small natural movement, shallow focus – the group slightly soft, him sharp. Documentary realism, 35mm. Ambient chatter and cutlery, no intelligible dialogue.

ON-SCREEN TEXT

1.0sHe understood every word.

5.0sHe had an answer.

8.5sBy the time it was ready, they had moved on.

AUDIO

None. Subtitles always — he may well be watching in his second language.

WHY THIS LANDS FOR ANDRÉS

The lunch table is the specific exclusion he feels weekly, and it is not the meeting — work English is the part he can already do.

L2DEMONSTRATION HOOK

C1 on paper. Three words out loud.

SEEDANCE PROMPT — PASTE AS WRITTEN

Cinematic 9:16 vertical, two shots. First: a man in his late twenties at a desk reading a dense English document, calm and fluent, natural window light, close on his eyes moving across the page. Cut to: the same man in an office lift, another person turns and asks him something, he answers in two or three words and looks at the floor. Cool even lighting, static tripod on the first shot, handheld on the second, 50mm. Ambient office tone.

ON-SCREEN TEXT

0.5sReading is recognition.

5.0sSpeaking is production.

9.5sDifferent muscle. No one trains it.

AUDIO

None.

WHY THIS LANDS FOR ANDRÉS

Respects his competence in the first shot before naming the gap in the second. Lead with the gap and he stops watching.

L3CONTRARIAN HOOK

12s · 9:16

400 days of vocabulary. Zero hours of talking.

SEEDANCE PROMPT — PASTE AS WRITTEN

Cinematic 9:16 vertical. Extreme close-up of a phone screen showing a long daily streak counter, thumb hovering. Pull back slowly to reveal a man in his late twenties alone at a café table, mouthing a sentence to himself, stopping halfway. Warm afternoon light through a window, shallow depth of field, 35mm, gentle grain. Café ambience, no dialogue.

ON-SCREEN TEXT

1.0s400 days. Every day.

5.5sAnd still three words in the lift.

9.0sThe streak was never the gap.

AUDIO

None.

WHY THIS LANDS FOR ANDRÉS

Names the thing he is proud of and shows why it did not transfer, without once implying he is a learner.
